"What is a normal day like for you?"

During session, my days are packed with meetings, committee hearings, more meetings, session, and more meetings.

My days begin as early as 7 a.m., and sometimes sooner. I will have a breakfast meeting with other legislators, with lobbyists, or with constituent groups concerned about legislation.

As a committee member, I must spend time studying the legislation under consideration, and then I spend time in the meetings listening to testimony on the legislation.

Session itself is time-consuming. There have been days when we are in session for more than 12 hours listening to debate on bills and casting our votes.

I also make an effort to meet with constituents who are visiting the Statehouse during session.

There are times when my day doesn't end until the next day!

Also, just because we're not in session 365 days a year doesn't mean we stop working for you. As a matter of fact, when I'm back home, I spend a lot of time attending meetings and community events.

It's critical for state lawmakers to spend time with the people they represent.

"How much do you get paid and what are your working hours?"

The Indiana General Assembly is a "citizen legislature" -- which means that our state representatives and state senators have full-time jobs in addition to serving in the Legislature.

My annual salary for serving as a state representative is $11,600. I receive half of that on January 15 and the other half on February 15.

The Indiana Constitution allows state lawmakers to receive a per diem, or daily allowance. During session, I receive $134 a day and I receive $53.60 a day for legislative business conducted during the interim, or out-of-session timeframe. Lawmakers are provided a per diem to help them cover the day-to-day expenses they incur in fulfilling their legislative duties. For example, I use my per diem during session to pay for food, phone calls, driving to meetings and other related expenses.

As to working hours, there is no set schedule. I receive phone calls at 7 o'clock Saturday morning and at 10 o'clock Wednesday night. Although Indiana does have a "part-time legislature," I am on the job year-round.

What do Indiana Legislators do for a Living?

Indiana has what is called a part-time citizen legislature. Indiana lawmakers live, work and raise a family in the district they represent. The state legislature is in session only two to four months a year, which allows lawmakers to spend a great deal of their time at home -- in the community they represent.

Here's a breakdown of the full-time jobs of Indiana's 100 State Representatives:

Facts About Your State Government

THE STATE CAPITOL

- Corydon was Indiana's state capitol before it was moved to Indianapolis in 1825. The original capitol cost $3,000 to build and is now a State Historical Site.
- The current state capitol was completed in 1888 and cost the state $1,980,969.
- The Statehouse dome is 105 feet high to the stained glass dome. It is another 130 feet to the top of the Statehouse.
- In the Statehouse rotunda, large statues represent the hallmarks of civilization: the statues represent Law, Oratory, Justice, Agriculture, Art, Commerce, Liberty and History.
- The state started renovating the Statehouse in 1986 to coincide with its centennial. It was decided that the interior of the capitol should look as it had in 1888. The Statehouse renovation was completed in 1988 at a cost of $10,937,292.

THE BRANCHES OF GOVERNMENT

Executive: The executive branch administers the state government and enforces state laws. This branch of government consists of 8 Constitutional offices which are elected by the citizens of Indiana. These offices are: Governor (Mitch Daniels), Lieutenant Governor (Becky Skillman), Secretary of State (Todd Rokita), State Treasurer (Tim Berry), State Auditor (Connie Nass), Attorney General (Steve Carter), Clerk of the Courts (David Lewis) and Superintendent of Public Instruction (Suellen Reed). This branch also consists of over 70 state agencies, boards and commissions that report to the Governor and Lieutenant Governor.

Legislative: The legislative branch is "the voice of the people" and writes the laws that we must follow. The legislature has two chambers, the House of Representatives and the State Senate. Indiana's General Assembly is a part-time legislature, meaning, its members are only in session for a few months each year. However, the members of the General Assembly and their staff work for constituents year-round.

Judicial: The judicial branch consists of the Supreme Court and the Appellate Court. It is the job of the judicial branch to uphold the laws of the state and our nation.

HOUSE

- With 100 state representatives, this is the larger of the two legislative bodies.
- Each state representative represents approximately 60,000 Hoosiers and is elected to two-year terms.
- The Speaker of the House presides over the members when in session.

SENATE

- With 50 state senators, the Senate is the smaller of the two legislative bodies.
- Each state senator represents approximately 120,000 Hoosiers, and is elected to four-year terms.
- The Lieutenant Governor presides over the Senate and may cast tie-breaking votes.

Government Glossary

This vocabulary list should help you understand the ins and outs of Indiana government.

★Speaker -- He or she presides over the House. The Speaker is always from the party in control of the House.

★Sponsor -- This is the person in the House who signs on to Senate bills and the senator who signs on to House bills to make sure they get through the other chamber.

★Veto -- When the governor refuses to allow a bill to become a law.

★Vote -- How bills are approved.

"How does a bill become a law?"

1. Bill Introduction

The first step in creating the laws we live by is for a representative or senator to write the bill. After the bill is drafted, it is then introduced by the author in either the House or the Senate. The author of the bill tries to get as many other representatives and senators as possible to support the bill in hopes of making it a law.

2. First Reading

The bill is presented to the House or the Senate and assigned to a committee.

3. Committee Reading

After a bill has been assigned to a committee, the committee will talk about what's good and bad about the bill. The public can attend a committee meeting and offer input on the proposal. After hearing public testimony and talking about the bill, the committee will decide if it's one that should become law. At this time, they can make any necessary changes to the bill. From there, the committee votes to pass the bill on to the full House or Senate for more study.

4. Second Reading

Once a bill has been approved by a committee, legislators receive a copy of it at least two days before second reading. The author or any legislator can try to amend, or change the bill. A majority (half plus one) is required to approve an amendment.

5. Third Reading

At this stage, the full House or Senate will vote to approve or defeat the bill. Again, a majority, which is 51 votes in the House and 26 votes in the Senate, is needed to approve a bill.

IF A BILL MAKES IT HERE, ITS A LAW!

8. The Governor

The governor has several options when he receives a bill. He can sign the bill into law, veto (reject) it, or do nothing. If he does nothing, the bill will become law without his signature in seven days. Legislators can override vetoes with a majority vote.

7. Conference Committees

After the bill has been considered by the other chamber, three things can happen:

(A) If no changes have been made, it's sent to the governor.

(B) If the bill is amended in the second house, it must return to the house it began in so the changes can be approved or turned down. If the changes are agreed upon, the bill goes to the governor. However, if the majority of the original house disagrees, the bill is sent to a conference committee for more discussion.

A conference committee is made up of two representatives and two senators. These four legislators study the bill and come up with an agreement which is then voted on by both houses. If both houses approve the amended bill, it's sent to the governor.

(C) The bill can be killed.

6. The Other Chamber

If the bill is approved in the house of origin, it moves to the second house, or chamber, where it goes through the same process again. All approved House bills move to the Senate and all approved Senate bills move to the House. At this time, the bill may be approved, amended or defeated.

Indiana Facts and Trivia

Population

The state ranks 14th in the nation in terms of population. According to the latest statistics, Indiana's population is 5,942,901.

State Flower

The state flower, adopted in 1957, is the peony.

State Bird

Adopted by the 1933 Indiana General Assembly, the state bird is the cardinal.

State Song

Written by Paul Dresser and adopted in 1913, the state song is "On the Banks of the Wabash."

*"Oh, the moonlight's fair tonight along the Wabash,
From the fields there comes the breath of new mown hay.
Thro' the sycamores the candle lights
are gleaming,
On the banks of the Wabash, far away."*

State River

The Wabash River is the official state river, under action taken by the 1996 Indiana General Assembly.

State Seal

Officially adopted by the 1963 Indiana General Assembly, the state seal depicts a pioneer scene: a woodsman is felling a tree, a buffalo is fleeing from the sound of the axe and the sun is gleaming over a distant hill.

The seal has been in use since 1801, even though it wasn't officially adopted until 1963.

The significance of the state seal is that it portrays "how the early people of Indiana overcame the wilderness."

Our State Flag

The rays symbolize far-reaching influence.

The torch represents liberty and enlightenment.

- ★ The 13 stars in the outer circle around the torch signify the 13 original states.
- ★ The 5 stars in the inner arc by the torch symbolize the next 5 states admitted to the union.
- ★ The star above the torch stands for Indiana, which was the 19th state to join the union.
